ABSTRACT

Five hundred and sixty-two listings of instructional materials for teaching about Africa are presented in this annotated bibliography to help teachers identify materials that will assist them in developing courses and units of study. Materials are identified that can be used by precollegiate teachers of all subject areas. This handbook is arranged by grade levels--preschool to grade three, grades 4-6, and grades 7-12. Within each section materials are divided by geographic region and listed alphabetically according to their instructional formats. The region divisions include Africa (general), Western, Eastern/Central, and Southern. Types of materials include multimedia, books, filmstrips and slides, records and tapes, maps and transparencies, duplicating masters, and pictures and charts. Entries include title, price, publisher and description. A list of publishers and distributors is included for ordering materials. The handbook concludes with two evaluation forms which may assist teachers in selecting materials on the basis of their cross-cultural value and for purposes of general assessments. (JR)

Documents acquired by ERIC include many informal unpublished materials not available from other sources. ERIC makes every effort to obtain the best copy available. Nevertheless, items of marginal reproducibility are often encountered and this affects the quality of the microfiche and hardcopy reproductions ERIC makes available via the ERIC Document Reproduction Service (EDRS). EDRS is not responsible for the quality of the original document. Reproductions supplied by EDRS are the best that can be made from the original.

INTRODUCTION

Despite the fact there is an increasing interest in Africa and African affairs, pre-collegiate schools in America have largely ignored introducing the study of Africa into their curriculum. This omission has implications for virtually every subject area. The need for fresh understanding on Africa, The Dark Continent is as urgent as any part of the world. The very term Dark exposes our ignorance and its attendant prejudices.

In a recent survey conducted by UCLA's African Studies Center among elementary students in the Southern California area, the results indicated an urgent need for accurate instruction materials. Among some of the questions answered in the survey, 93% said that Africa was a country, 97% thought it was entirely jungle, and 100% thought Africa was always very hot; that it was inhabited totally by blacks; that it was filled with wild animals; and that it was smaller than the United States.

However, while the United States is a very large country, Africa is a very large continent. It is, in fact, three and one-half times the size of the U.S. and has a population of two hundred fifty million (250,000,000) and has over eight hundred (800) different groups of people based on language, together with different dialects belonging to each of these languages.

Through the Center's outreach program we have attempted to demonstrate the special situation of Africa and thus produce a better, more tolerant understanding of the continent. We are often asked where teachers can find materials that will assist them in developing units and courses for their students. In some instances we were able to become directly involved in materials being prepared such as our multi-media kit on African culture and art and in other instances we were able to indicate where a teacher might seek further assistance from our existing available resources.

The African Studies Center in cooperation with the Curriculum Inquiry Center and the Graduate School of Education have embarked on a project to assist teachers at the pre-collegiate level in the study of African history, society and culture. A first step has been the identification of current materials organized by grade level, region and format. We have attempted to provide to the classroom teacher a comprehensive bibliography of instructional materials for the study of Africa.

Previous studies in the Los Angeles area indicated that many teachers felt motivated to offer units on Africa, but were not aware of the extent and sources of materials on the subject. The materials which are listed below may serve to augment or replace materials already in use by teachers.

The attempt has been made to be as inclusive as possible with regard to both grade level and type of instructional material. Educational publishing information on file at the Curriculum Inquiry Center in the Graduate School of Education at UCLA was extensively surveyed for materials directly related to the study of Africa at the precollegiate level. Those materials selected were arranged by grade level appropriateness, region of Africa included in the unit, and instructional format. If a brief description of the unit was included in the publisher's statement then it also appears (in edited form) in the bibliography. It is important to stress the fact that it was not possible to evaluate the numerous items listed. The second stage of the Africa project will be to build a collection of African instuctional materials in the Curriculum Inquiry Center and begin a systematic evaluation in cooperation with the Graduate School of Education.

Two model evaluation forms have been appended which may assist the teacher in the task of materials evaluation. The "Materials Assessment Sheet" will allow the user to form some judgment as to the quality of the cross-cultural content of the materials. Users are encouraged first to attempt to receive the materials on an approval bases and then to apply some evaluation guidelines before purchasing. Some students at the upper secondary level may be able to work with more advanced materials usually required at the college level. These materials have not been listed in this bibliography, and the teacher is urged to consult additional bibliographies which are oriented to the college level.

EDITOR'S NOTE

A price designation in an entry refers to the price listed in the publisher's catalogue and should be considered changeable.

Some entries do not include dates of publication. They either were not listed or could not be found in other reference sources.

If the publisher or distributor does not appear in the index it is suggested that the user attempt to locate the materials through the nearest educational materials resource center.

Instructional materials, especially books, listed for Grades 7-12 are often suitable for both teachers and students. Many of the books are standard introductions to the subject matter and would serve as excellent teacher preparation texts.
